EX-DICTATOR PASSES AWAY ON THURSDAY

Chang Tso Lin Wounded While Fleeing From Peking After Nationalist Advance.

MUKDEN, CHINA, June 20 — The death of Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord and former dictator of the North China government, was announced officially today.

The announcement said the Manchurian ruler had died this morning.

The Manchurian commander was injured late in May when his special train, in which he was fleeing from Peking after the successful Nationalist advance, was bombed on the outskirts of Mukden.

Chang Tso Lin was wounded in the head and taken immediately to his home within the walled city. A great corps of doctors was called in to treat him and they issued encouraging reports as to his condition indicating he still was directing his forces.

It was announced officially that the funeral services for the late leader would last three days, beginning Saturday.

Chang Tso Lin was injured May 28, at the outskirts of Mukden while fleeing from the Nationalist troops who were advancing on Peking. Within a few hours his death had been rumored in many parts of the world, particularly in Tokio.

There were official denials but finally when the rumor persisted there came silence for Mukden.

He was one of the outstanding men in recent Chinese history. Small, wiry and keenly observant he had moulded together a government in Mancuhria that virtually was free from all alliances with the remainder of China.

He took over, after a bitter assault on the central powers, the government of Peking in 1924 and since had ruled there. He claimed all of his efforts at controlling the central government were aimed towards protecting China from Communism. He had repeatedly made known his dislike for Communism and had feared it might gain headway through his nation.

When the Nationalists, under Feng Yu-Hsiang, started their drive towards Peking Chang Tso-Lin made ready to protect the northern capital. He threw his forces in a defense line about the city and engaged the southerners in many vigorous battles.

Finally late in May, when the Nationalists approached perilously close to the capital, Chang Tso Lin announced his control of the Peking government, said he hoped for a reuniting of China, and then fled the city amide the cheers and military salutes of the citizens.

As his special train pulled into Mukden, his northern stronghold, it was bombed and Chang received his fatal injuries.

Recent dispatches from Tokio said that Chang Tso Lin's eldest son, Chang Hsieuh-Liang, was expected to take over control of the northern government and possibly become generalissimo of the Mukden armies.

SILENCE HOLDS SWAY IN CITY'S NEWEST MURDER

Same Tense and Tight-Lipped "Atmosphere" Follows New Outbreak.

CHICAGO, June 21 — The tense and tight-lipped silence which follows each new outbreak in Chicago's gangland defied the efforts of police today to solve the latest series of assassinations.

Although officials attributed the murders of John "Bowlegs" Oliveri, Joseph Salamone and James Reggi to the notorious Aiello gang, it virtually was impossible to gather any evidence against suspects.

A hush lay over little Italy's "Death Corner" at Cambridge and Oak-sts. where Salamone and Oliveri, like more than 50 other men in recent years, were killed.

Although many arrests have been made, the police admitted frankly they did not know where to begin prosecuting.

Nevertheless, they concentrated their investigation on the once-powerful, but now distintegrating alcohol ring of the four Aiello brothers. Oliveri and Salamone, it was reported, had been associated with the Aiello organization but recently had gone over to the forces of "Scarface Al" Capone. Reggi was a former chauffeur of "Dago Mike" Carozzo.

Dominic Aiello, police said, was the only one of the four brothers still in Chicago.

Chief of Detectives Grady and other officers believe Aiello, determined to bolster his waning power, has been using terrorist methods to inspire fear in the thinning ranks of his henchmen.

CITY COUNCIL TO BALLOT ON NEW HOSPITAL

Resolution To Put Frank Berger Bequest Up at November Election is Coming

Circleville and Pickaway-co. moved a step nearer toward its hope of having a modern hospital, at the meeting of City Council, Wednesday night.

City Solicitor Paul Adkins told council that he would be ready to present to council at its next meeting, a resolution, the adoption of which would place on the ballot at the November election the question as to whether or not the city wishes to accept the bequest of the late Frank Berger.

Mr. Berger left the residue of an estate, or a sum amounting to $30,000, for a hospital, provided the city raised a like amount.

The city solicitor also reported that traffic signs, which are being contemplated, can be erected without the necessity of passing an ordinance.

Mr. F. H. Waring, a representative from the State Board of Health, was present, and addressed Council concerning the present and future problems which the City will have to consider.

He stated that as soon as the city of Columbus has completed its new sewage disposal plant that the other cities along the Scioto river will be required to also construct sewage disposal plants.

He suggested that Council employ the services of a competent engineer to assist the City in preparing a general sewage system with the view as to the future location of a disposal plant, and that this should be done before any more connections are made to the present plan.

He also stated that the expense could be met by the issuing of bonds for the entire cost, but that some cities in this State are making a connection charge and this money is used for the upkeep and other expenses of the sewer system.

The Solicitor was requested to ask the State Board of Health for a formal approval of the three sanitary sewers under consideration at this time, and to report to Council as soon as possible.

Mr. Baker presided at the meeting, when all members reported present, excepting President Goeller.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

THINK AMUNDSEN MAY HAVE KEPT ON IN ITALIA HUNT

OSLO, NORWAY, June 21 — The possibility that Roald Amundsen, missing since Monday night might have gone in search of the 7 men who were carried away with the Italia, after it had dropped on the ice leaving General Nobile and eight men stranded, was brought out today by the newspaper Morgen Bladet.

The newspaper said it had learned that Amundsen told friends, before departing for Tromsoe, that he thought the seven men with the bag and the three men who later walked away from Nobile's encampment were in far greater need of help than was the Nobile party.

PICKAWAY-CO. LAND FLOODED BY BIG RAINS

Scioto River Is About To Go Over Road; Much Corn Is Total Loss.

The Scioto river threatened to go over the road west of Circleville this afternoon, with hundreds of acres of fields flooded. If more rain falls Pickaway-co. will be confronted with the worst flood in its history since 1913.

Farmers will lose thousands of dollars in corn crops.

The heavy rains for the past few days have raised the Scioto river and the small streams to such an extent that they have overflowed their banks and filled the lowlands with water covering the young growing corn and caused considerable damage to growing crops.

Clearcreek, Paint creek, and Walnut creeks, have been at flood stage for several days, and farmers report considerable damage to crops.

Over on Hamilton Run in Perry-twp. Paint creek has backed up in its overflow and damaged corn. The heavy rains it is reported have washed ground away from the corn and it is doubtful if the corn if not given attention by cultivation soon will be a total loss.

The main trouble is that the soil has been so soaked, that farmers have been unable to get into the fields to cultivate, and weeds are taking the crop.

Stories of men and boys getting big fish are coming in. Over at New Holland Charles Schrake, Wednesday, landed a carp weighing 16 pounds. These fish come up out of creeks, get into shallow water left after the stream goes down, and are caught.

A number of granny cats and carp are being caught on the river bottom land near this city. Farmers only fork out the big ones, leaving the smaller fish in the ponds made by the flood.

The river is still rising, but it has nearly reached its peak. Tuesday night it rose seven and a half feet. Wednesday, and Wednesday night two feet more. The river must rise another foot to go over the road.

H. M. Crites and Wesley Jusus report big losses to corn by the indundation.

It is feared that a number of other planters of corn have suffered losses.

Besides election yesterday of officers, delegates to the National encampment in Denver were selected as follows: William Clouse, Ironton; Fred Sparks, Norwood; George Funk, Glouster; Donald Caper, Sandusky; W. Heffner, Lima; Theodore Tucker, Toledo; J. T. Romig, New Philadelphia.

CITY COUNCIL TO BALLOT ON NEW HOSPITAL

Resolution To Put Frank Berger Bequest Up at November Election is Coming

Circleville and Pickaway-co. moved a step nearer toward its hope of having a modern hospital, at the meeting of City Council, Wednesday night.

City Solicitor Paul Adkins told council that he would be ready to present to council at its next meeting, a resolution, the adoption of which would place on the ballot at the November election the question as to whether or not the city wishes to accept the bequest of the late Frank Berger.

Mr. Berger left the residue of an estate, or a sum amounting to $30,000, for a hospital, provided the city raised a like amount.

The city solicitor also reported that traffic signs, which are being contemplated, can be erected without the necessity of passing an ordinance.

Mr. F. H. Waring, a representative from the State Board of Health, was present, and addressed Council concerning the present and future problems which the City will have to consider.

He stated that as soon as the city of Columbus has completed its new sewage disposal plant that the other cities along the Scioto river will be required to also construct sewage disposal plants.

He suggested that Council employ the services of a competent engineer to assist the City in preparing a general sewage system with the view as to the future location of a disposal plant, and that this should be done before any more connections are made to the present plan.

He also stated that the expense could be met by the issuing of bonds for the entire cost, but that some cities in this State are making a connection charge and this money is used for the upkeep and other expenses of the sewer system.

The Solicitor was requested to ask the State Board of Health for a formal approval of the three sanitary sewers under consideration at this time, and to report to Council as soon as possible.

Mr. Baker presided at the meeting, when all members reported present, excepting President Goeller.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

THINK AMUNDSEN MAY HAVE KEPT ON IN ITALIA HUNT

OSLO, NORWAY, June 21 — The possibility that Roald Amundsen, missing since Monday night might have gone in seach of the 7 men who were carried away with the Italia, after it had dropped on the ice leaving Generad Nobile and eight men stranded, was brought out today by the newspaper Morgen Bladet.

The newspaper said it had learned that Amundsen told friends, before departing for Tromsoe, that he thought the seven men with the bag and the three men who later walked away from Nobile's encampment were in far greater need of help than was the Nobile party.

A crowd of 23,000 turned out to see the aged veterans who, although most of them were more than 80 years of age, were undaunted by the rain which fell constantly and the fatiguing series of activities which took place before the parade.

Besides election yesterday of officers, delegates to the National encampment in Denver were selected as follows: William Clouse, Ironton; Fred Sparks, Norwood; George Funk, Glouster; Donald Caper, Sandusky; W. Heffner, Lima; Theodore Tucker, Toledo; J. T. Romig, New Philadelphia.

PICKAWAY-CO. LAND FLOODED BY BIG RAINS

The Scioto river threatened to go over the road west of Circleville this afternoon, with hundreds of acres of fields flooded. If more rain falls Pickaway-co. will be confronted with the worst flood in its history since 1913.

Farmers will lose thousands of dollars in corn crops.

The heavy rains for the past few days have raised the Scioto river and the small streams to such an extent that they have overflowed their banks and filled the lowlands with water covering the young growing corn and caused considerable damage to growing crops.

Clearcreek, Paint creek, and Walnut creeks, have been at flood stage for several days, and farmers report considerable damage to crops.

Over on Hamilton Run in Perry-twp. Paint creek has backed up in its overflow and damaged corn. The heavy rains it is reported have washed ground away from the corn and it is doubted if the corn if not given attention by cultivation soon will be a total loss.

The main trouble is that the soil has been so soaked, that farmers have been unable to get into the fields to cultivate, and weeds are taking the crop.

Stories of men and boys getting big fish are coming in. Over at New Holland Charles Schrake, Wednesday, landed a carp weighing 16 pounds. These fish come up out of creeks, get into shallow water left after the stream goes down, and are caught.

A number of granny cats and carp are being caught on the river bottom land near this city. Farmers only fork out the big ones, leaving the smaller fish in the ponds made by the flood.

The river is still rising, but it has nearly reached its peak. Tuesday night it rose seven and a half feet. Wednesday, and Wednesday night two feet more. The riven must rise another foot to go over the road.

H. M. Crites and Wesley Jusus report big losses to corn by the indundation.

It is feared that a number of other planters of corn have suffered losses.

ORPHANS TO HAVE ALL-DAY OUTING; GIVEN BY CLUB

Waifs From Pickaway, Madison And Union Counties To Be Feted June 21

Several hundred orphans of Madison, Union and Pickaway counties are counting the days until June 21, when the Columbus Automobile Club will stage its annual Orphans' Outing at Olentangy park, Columbus. The event for many years has been outstanding in the lives of the parentless tots.

W. S. Bird, Manager of the Club, which carries its service into the above three counties, announced this week that all arrangements had been made for giving the kiddies a complete day of fun. Toys, of a permanent nature, candy, ice cream, rides on everything and scores of games with prizes will cram the day with joyous things to do.

Mr. Bird makes an appeal for nominal donations from citizens of the three counties to help defray the cost of toys, candy and prizes. The complete cost of the picnic is in excess of $1,000 and, according to custom, this is met by donations ranging from $1 to $10.

"The more money we receive," Mr. Bird said, "the finer picnic we can give the kiddies. It's the one big day a year for them and I'm sure citizens of the three counties outside Franklin will give their liberal support. Checks should be made out to Orphans' Outing Committee and addressed to the Columbus Automobile Club, Southern Hotel, Columbus."

Kiddies from Madison, Pickaway and Union counties will be brought to the park by busses donated by the Club.

3 AMERICAN FLIERS GO OUT TO SEE LONDON

First Woman To Cross Atlantic and Male Companions Now Are "Tourists."

LONDON, June 21.—A trio of adventurous fliers, including the first woman ever to fly across the Atlantic, today attempted to enjoy London just as any group of American tourists might.

They have dropped the costumes that marked them as the trio who pilote the Fokker airplane Friendship through the fog across the Atlantic and now Miss Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon are trying to see England without all the fuss that the British nation would give them.

Miss Earhart, who came to England with an equipment consisting of flying costume and tooth brush, set the example for her male companions. Donning a borrowed dress she went shopping yesterday afternoon and purchased finery so dear to the heart of every woman.

She was closely followed as she made her purchases, by an admiring crowd.

But Stultz and Gordon found it simple to go about shopping and they loaded up with fanciful supplies. Slipping away from the Hyde Park hotel, they headed for Selfridge's great store and a couple of small Bond-st. shops. Their purchases included gay British socks, shirts and ties.

Miss Earhart was guest at luncheon at the residence of Mrs. Frederick E. Guest yesterday and last night the woman transatlantic flyer, Stultz and Gordon all were dinner guests at the same residence.

The Boston girl spent the night at the Guest home while Stultz and Gordon returned to their hotel.

An Amazing Public Tribute!

- two thousand carloads of General Electric Refrigerators delivered to users since April first

The General Electric Refrigerator has now been on the market just one year. From the day it was first announced, it was accepted by the public with truly amazing enthusiasm.

Since April first, more than 2000 carloads have been delivered to American homes. This is a gratifying tribute to the General Electric Refrigerator—a true achievement in electrical engineering. It is the worthy product of the Research Laboratories of the world's largest electrical manufacturer.

Nine factories working at top speed

The tremendous demand for these "years ahead" refrigerators has made it necessary to increase production again and again—just as rapidly as is consistent with General Electric standards of quality. Now nine factories are working at top speed to take care of the increasing volume of business.

Just as soon as each refrigerator has passed its many rigid tests, it is shipped to a waiting customer. We are assured by the factories that all orders now on file will be filled within the next few weeks

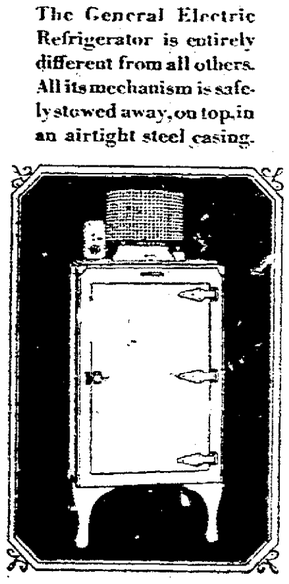
We suggest that you place your order now

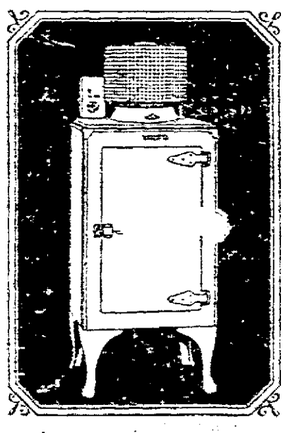
If you are planning to purchase a refrigerator this summer, we strongly advise you to come in at once and place your order. Then you will be sure of having your refrigerator just as soon as you are ready for it.

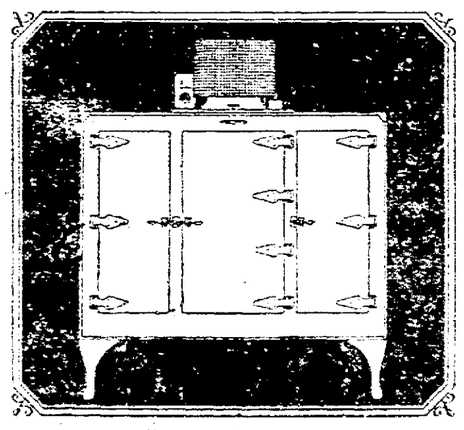
The first 100,000 discriminating American women to choose this revolutionary refrigerator have been its best advertisers. They have pronounced it unusually quiet, economical in operation, easy to keep clean and worry-proof. It is their verdict which, in a large measure, is responsible for this hearty nation-wide acceptance!

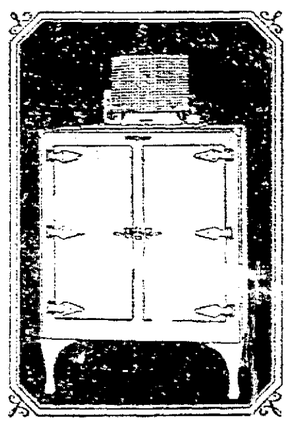
GENERAL ELECTRIC
Refrigerator

The General Electric Refrigerator is entirely different from all others. All its mechanism is safely stowed away, on top, in an airtight steel casing.









These refrigerators are unusually quiet, automatic, and they never need oiling. They are made and guaranteed by General Electric.

THE LEGACY OF LOVE

A. H. Woodward, Birmingham capitalist, rated one of the wealthiest men in the south, has just received a priceless legacy from his mother.

Woodward has reached the point where he doesn't need any more money. But this legacy wasn't money; it wasn't anything that money could ever buy.

His mother's will was read recently, after her death. In it was the following paragraph:

"I wish my son, A. H. Woodward, to know that he has never given me cause for unhappiness or worry during his life, and it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love."

That is the priceless legacy the rich Mr. Woodward received It is worth far more than any monetary bequest could possibly be worth; it would be so even if the recipient had not a dime to his name.

Money, when the real, fundamental things of life are concerned, is not a commodity of very great value, after all. It will buy food, clothing, houses, automobiles and such like, and they are very fine; yet a man cannot live by them alone The thing that sets a man above the beasts makes life worth living and convinces him his immortality has nothing to do with money. It has to do rather, with the giving of service and devotion and the receiving of love in return.

And, as a man grows older, there is the matter of memory. All that he has done is the material out of which his memory weaves a background If this background has a texture that will bear close inspection, the man need not worry about his declining days; they will be happy. If it happens to be otherwise, his money will be able to do much to pad his last years

It is in these fundamentals that Mr. Woodward has been made rich beyond most men. How many men can look back into the past and see a record such as his: "he has never given me cause for unhappiness or worry during his life?" How many men would not give every cent they own to be able to do it

And then there is that other line: "it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love." The man who has the memory of such devotion is not in need of much else.

Truly it was a splendid legacy that Mr. Woodward received. To a real man it is more valuable than any collection of stocks and bonds you can imagine. Stocks and bonds you can use for a while, but when you die you cannot take them with you. But love—or so we believe and trust—can be taken on, beyond the grave, and kept forever.

THE WOMEN OF THE WORLD WAR

President Coolidge has laid the cornerstone of the new memorial building to women of the World war, construction of which has begun at Washington

The toils and sacrifices of women in a time of war equal those of men. They do not have to stand the hell of fire in the trenches, yet they take plenty of physical risks, and great numbers of them have broken down under the strain of nursing and war work. They have to see their loved ones depart for the scene of carnage, which is something worse than anything that can happen to the men.

DEPRIVATION'S LESSON

Nations like individuals, are often benefited by being deprived of things. It makes them develop resources of their own.

Potash salts are very essential to agriculture and industry. The United States always used to import most of its supply from Germany But when the World War came along this source was shut off, and some new source had to be found.

It wasn't found right away. But the Interior Department began a search that has lasted ever since; and now it announces the discovery of rich deposits in Texas which eventually may make us independent of all other potash beds.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. Rose Shannon, escaping from the unwelcome attentions of Chuck White, finds the satchel in the street. A policeman arrests her on her way to return it. He takes Rose to the station, where she is held as an accomplice when it is found that the satchel is empty. She is released a week later, but detectives trail her Chuck takes Rose to the Professor, leader of the gang involved in the robbery On the pretext of befriending her the Professor promises Rose that Chuck will take her to his aunt in the country.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Well, come on, honey." Chuck took Rose's arm and led her towards the door that opened into the hallway "I want you to take a look at all the swell glad rags we got for you, and you better climb into some of 'em I'll take you upstairs"

"I hope you'll like everything we bought for you." The Professor patted the girl's shoulder

"Oh, thank you" Rose hurried away with Chuck, her heart beating high with excitement and happiness. "You know, Chuck," she sighed as they went up the steps, "it all sounds just like a dream, I can hardly believe it's me—it don't seem possible. I'd just love to dance up and down, I'm so happy."

"That's great!" Chuck enthused. "We're gonna have a swell time down to th' old farm. I ain't been down there much since I was a kid Here, you can use this room" Chuck threw open a door at the head of the stairs and led Rose in. "Here's all the stuff. I guess it'll fit you, all right"

Rose looked about the old room, furnished much on the order of the shop downstairs A great, old mahogany four-poster bed occupied a large part of the space. Across the room stood a huge dresser of a later period, with a long mirror hung between the rows of small drawers On the bed reposed several boxes, a hat box, and a new, black traveling satchel

"That's a new bag I got for you, honey." Chuck indicated the satchel on the bed. "I didn't know if you had one. I guess you can find everything all right. An' all the boxes is yours Just park your old stuff here—you can get it when you come back. We ain't got much time"

"Oh, Chuck, you've been so good to me" The hot tears welled up in the girl's eyes, and splashed down her cheeks.

"Here, now, didn't I tell you you oughtn't to cry?"

"But I'm not crying," she smiled through her tears. "I'm just happy"

"Atta boy!" Chuck caught the girl in his arms and kissed her. "I'll wait downstairs. An' hurry up."

"All right, Chuck." She closed the door behind him and turned to the boxes on the bed

She threw off her hat and coat with a sigh of relief. New clothes—all her own! She opened the first, and with a little cry of joy drew forth an ensemble suit of dark brown trimmed with fluffy brown fur She opened the other two boxes quickly to find a jersey suit of light blue with a bright colored scarf to tie about the neck. She discovered two pairs of shoes, one of brown kid, the other black patent leather with several pairs of stockings for each. She kicked off her dusty, frayed satin pumps and slipped her feet into the brown shoes. They fitted perfectly.

The round hat box contained a brown felt hat that just matched the suit, and a right straw cloche that Rose was quite certain was just the grandest thing she had ever seen in her life She danced up before the mirror, and began removing her old garments and prepared to step into the new.

At last, after adjusting the new hat at various and odd angles she finally settled it to suit her fancy and then began to pack her few belongings in the new traveling bag.

CHAPTER X

Downstairs in the shop the Professor was peering out the window hidden by the tapestry. Across the street he could see two men saunter by and round the corner Simpson and Cowles—he knew them Well, he had figured right so far If none of his plans went awry the money should soon be safe and within his keeping.

"The dicks still waiting?" Chuck came into the room, lighting a cigarette

"Sure—the saps!" the Professor turned about. "Well, how did you make out? Everything all right?"

"All right? I'll tell the cock eyed world it is," Chuck laughed "Didn't you get that right off the bat? Jeez, she fell for the line I handed her, an' she didn't ask no questions She just eats it up"

"Look here, you've got everything straight now, haven't you? If you don't put this thing through in pretty short order I'll break every bone in your body!" Heminway suddenly became a tower of rage, shaking his fists in the younger man's face.

"Aw, pipe down," Chuck counseled coolly, blowing a ring of smoke towards the ceiling "I'm gonna put this through all right. An' I'm gonna get even with this jane if it's the last thing I do Say, you don't suppose I'm gonna lay down on this job after the way she beaned me. Well, I should spit!"

"Well, I'll give you one month—no more. Remember that," Heminway shot out his orders menacingly "You've got one month to find out from that jane where the money is, and God help you if you double cross me!"

"Say, what d'ya think I am—a flat foot? I'll find out—it won't take me a week," he promised jauntily

"Look here, don't be so sure of yourself," the Professor advised "That baby's either damned clever, or she's just so plain dumb the other mob's using her. And personally, I think she's clever. No one could be as dumb as she is and live I've seen her kind work before Playing the sweet and simple country girl! That was a swell cock and bull story she had cooked up about the farm back in Iowa. I'll bet she doesn't know a hen from an egg except when she sees it in a restaurant all cooked"

"You know sometimes you even show intelligence, Professor," Chuck grinned.

"Well, just remember what I told you Maurey was here—he thinks we've got the right dope. Did you see Bobbie upstairs?"

"Yep! I told her I'd let her know when everything's ready," Chuck nodded "Them poor boneheads still hanging around?" He crossed over to the window and peered out "Yep, there they are," he laughed "They're gonna be sore as hell when they find out what's going on."

"Shut up!" the Professor snapped. "She's coming! Mug, get over at that window and keep an eye on those dicks Quick! Sparrow, do your stuff!" Heminway pulled his glasses down onto his nose as Rose opened the door and stepped into the room. her traveling case in her hand

"Well?" She dropped the satchel and pirouted about displaying the dress

"You look perfectly charming my dear" The Professor took her hand and led her out into the shop "Doesn't she, Chuck?" His kindly face smiled beneficently

"I'll say she does." Chuck looked approvingly at the girl. "Did you like the glad rags, honey?"

"Oh, Chuck, they're perfectly beautiful," Rose returned delightedly. "I've never had so many pretty things at once in all my life And everything fits, too"

"Sure. I remember everything about you, see," Chuck returned "Well, I guess I better get my kiester an' we can get going. I'll be right back." He started towards the door, signalling the Professor with a nod of his head

"Don't worry. I'll take good care of this young lady," Heminway beamed. "You come over here, my dear. I've something I want to show you" He led Rose by the arm to the little office in the rear of the shop

Chuck bounded up the stairs, two at a time, and threw open the door of the room where he had left Bobbie

"Come on, kid, quick! She's downstairs. Leave your stuff here You can come back for it." He hurried the girl into the room just vacated by Rose "Hell! I hope she's left the scenery Yep, there they are" He indicated the discarded clothing on the bed. "Hop into 'em"

Summer White House Announces President Caught Six River Trout.

SUPERIOR, Wis, June 21—All doubt of President Coolidge's adroitness with hook and line has been dissipated.

The summer white house announced officially last night that the president's creel encased six Brule river trout when he returned from a fishing expedition that lasted from early morning until late in the afternoon

Summer white house officials considered the feat of sufficient importance to summon to the executive offices here all the correspondents who could be reached either by telephone or messenger An official bulletin was issued on the catch.

The largest of the six fish landed by President Coolidge, the official bulletin said, was a Lochlaven, weighing 7 3-4 pounds The next largest was a Rainbow that weighed 1 1-4 pounds

Attendants at the executive offices, who received the announcement by private long distance telephone from Cedar Island lodge, neglected to ascertain what bait was used.

The president was accompanied on the expedition by Col E W. Starling of the executive staff. Colonel Starling, himself a notable fly caster, has been in a quandary trying to detect just why the thousands of trout on the Pierce estate, privately raised and kept on reduced rations to aid the president in his trouting, have assiduously held aloof from Mr Coolidge's line

THE LEGACY OF LOVE

Woodward has reached the point where he doesn't need any more money. But this legacy wasn't money; it wasn't anything that money could ever buy.

His mother's will was read recently, after her death. In it was the following paragraph:

"I wish my son, A. H. Woodward, to know that he has never given me cause for unhappiness or worry during his life, and it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love."

That is the priceless legacy the rich Mr. Woodward received. It is worth far more than any monetary bequest could possibly be worth; it would be so even if the recipient had not a dime to his name.

Money, when the real, fundamental things of life are concerned, is not a commodity of very great value, after all. It will buy food, clothing, houses, automobiles and such like, and they are very fine; yet a man cannot live by them alone. The thing that sets a man above the beasts makes life worth living and convinces him his immortality has nothing to do with money. It has to do rather, with the giving of service and devotion and the receiving of love in return.

And, as a man grows older, there is the matter of memory. All that he has done is the material out of which his memory weaves a background. If this background has a texture that will bear close inspection, the man need not worry about his declining days; they will be happy. If it happens to be otherwise, his money will be able to do much to pad his last years.

It is in these fundamentals that Mr. Woodward has been made rich beyond most men. How many men can look back into the past and see a record such as his: "he has never given me cause for unhappiness or worry during his life?" How many men would not give every cent they own to be able to do it.

And then there is that other line: "it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love." The man who has the memory of such devotion is not in need of much else.

"All right, Chuck." She closed the door behind him and turned to the boxes on the bed.

She threw off her hat and coat with a sigh of relief. New clothes—all her own! She opened the first, and with a little cry of joy drew forth an ensemble suit of dark brown trimmed with fluffy brown fur. She opened the other two boxes quickly to find a jersey suit of light blue with a bright colored scarf to tie about the neck. She discovered two pairs of shoes, one of brown kid, the other black patent leather with several pairs of stockings for each. She kicked off her dusty, frayed satin pumps and slipped her feet into the brown shoes. They fitted perfectly.

The round hat box contained a brown felt hat that just matched the suit, and a light straw cloche that Rose was quite certain was just the grandest thing she had ever seen in her life. She danced up before the mirror, and began removing her old garments and prepared to step into the new.

At last, after adjusting the new hat at various and odd angles she finally settled it to suit her fancy and then began to pack her few belongings in the new traveling bag.

CHAPTER X

Downstairs in the shop the Professor was peering out the window, hidden by the tapestry. Across the street he could see two men saunter by and round the corner. Simpson and Cowles—he knew them. Well, he had figured right so far. If none of his plans went awry the money should soon be safe and within his keeping.

"The dicks still waiting?" Chuck came into the room, lighting a cigarette.

"Sure—the saps!" the Professor turned about. "Well, how did you make out? Everything all right?"

"All right? I'll tell the cock-eyed world it is," Chuck laughed. "Didn't you get that right off the bat? Jeez, she fell for the line I handed her, an' she didn't ask no questions. She just eats it up."

"Look here, you've got everything straight now, haven't you? If you don't put this thing through in pretty short order I'll break every bone in your body!" Heminway suddenly became a tower of rage, shaking his fists in the younger man's face.

"Aw, pipe down," Chuck counseled coolly, blowing a ring of smoke towards the ceiling. "I'm gonna put this through all right. An' I'm gonna get even with this jane if it's the last thing I do. Say, you don't suppose I'm gonna lay down on this job after the way she beaned me. Well, I should spit!"

"Well, I'll give you one month—no more. Remember that," Heminway shot out his orders menacingly. "You've got one month to find out from that jane where the money is, and God help you if you double-cross me!"

"Say, what d'ya think I am—a flat foot? I'll find out—it won't take me a week," he promised jauntily.

"Look here, don't be so sure of yourself," the Professor advised. "That baby's either damned clever, or she's just so plain dumb the other mob's using her. And personally, I think she's clever. No one could be as dumb as she is and live. I've seen her kind work before. Playing the sweet and simple country girl! That was a swell cock and bull story she had cooked up about the farm back in Iowa. I'll bet she doesn't know a hen from an egg except when she sees it in a restaurant all cooked."

"You know sometimes you even show intelligence, Professor," Chuck grinned.

"Well, just remember what I told you. Maurey was here—he thinks we've got the right dope. Did you see Bobbie upstairs?"

"Yep! I told her I'd let her know when everything's ready," Chuck nodded. "Them poor boneheads still hanging around?" He crossed over to the window and peered out. "Yep, there they are," he laughed. "They're gonna be sore as hell when they find out what's going on."

"Shut up!" the Professor snapped. "She's coming! Mug, get over at that window and keep an eye on those dicks. Quick! Sparrow, do your stuff!" Heminway pulled his glasses down onto his nose as Rose opened the door and stepped into the room, her traveling case in her hand.

"Well?" She dropped the satchel and pirouted about displaying the dress.

"You look perfectly charming, my dear." The Professor took her hand and led her out into the shop. "Doesn't she, Chuck?" His kindly face smiled beneficently.

"I'll say she does." Chuck looked approvingly at the girl. "Did you like the glad rags, honey?"

"Oh, Chuck, they're perfectly beautiful," Rose returned delightedly. "I've never had so many pretty things at once in all my life. And everything fits, too."

"Sure, I remember everything about you, see," Chuck returned. "Well, I guess I better get my keister an' we can get going. I'll be right back." He started towards the door, signalling the Professor with a nod of his head.

"Don't worry, I'll take good care of this young lady," Heminway beamed. "You come over here, my dear. I've something I want to show you." He led Rose by the arm to the little office in the rear of the shop.

"Come on, kid, quick! She's downstairs. Leave your stuff here. You can come back for it." He hurried the girl into the room just vacated by Rose. "Hell! I hope she's left the scenery. Yep, there they are." He indicated the discarded clothing on the bed. "Hop into 'em."

Summer White House Announces President Caught Six River Trout.

The summer white house announced officially last night that the president's creel encased six Brule river trout when he returned from a fishing expedition that lasted from early morning until late in the afternoon.

Summer white house officials considered the feat of sufficient importance to summon to the executive offices here all the correspondents who could be reached either by telephone or messenger. An official bulletin was issued on the catch.

The largest of the six fish landed by President Coolidge, the official bulletin said, was a Lochlaven, weighing 1 3-4 pounds. The next largest was a Rainbow that weighed 1 1-4 pounds.

Attendants at the executive offices, who received the announcement by private long distance telephone from Cedar Island lodge, neglected to ascertain what bait was used.

The president was accompanied on the expedition by Col. E. W. Starling of the executive staff. Colonel Starling, himself a notable fly caster, has been in a quandary trying to detect just why the thousands of trout on the Pierce estate, privately raised and kept on reduced rations to aid the president in his trouting, have assiduously held aloof from Mr. Cooldige's line.

The Fast Get-Away —the Quick Stop of Modern Motors Demand Modern Tires

What OTHER tire has kept pace with the rapid development in motor cars, particularly in the past two years—their higher speed, extra power, quicker get-away, sudden stopping—punishment that tears down the ordinary carcass and grinds off the tread of any tire not built to meet the new driving conditions.

Built bigger and better through and through. Not merely thicker in tread—not merely more rubber on the surface. Even some of the cheaper tires can copy the thickness of the tread, but it isn't only the amount of rubber that counts with General—it's the kind. Not simply more rubber but more pure rubber, more per tire—and not only more in the tread but more inside.

Bigger, thicker tires and more quality in the rubber—that is the sort of tire foundation the modern motor car must have. It is the reason for car owners everywhere turning to top quality—

Protection That Cannot Be Duplicated By Any Other Tire

It's not only the second 10,000 miles that makes the big bit, but the uninterrupted service that carries through to the last mile—the protection that can be given only when it is built into the tire—

Not the protection that dodges the question of natural wear and insures against accidents by promising free repairs—

Not the sort of protection that you collect on only by having trouble—But the "top quality" protection that means avoidance of delay, of dirt, of soiled and sometimes spoiled clothing, of ruined tubes through going flat.

These are the real protections that car owners want today, particularly since reclaimed rubber in tires has proved such a troublesome experiment for millions of users by causing tires to go out prematurely.

During This Sale the Friends We Make Are More Important Than Profits

No other occasions in the rubber industry have so stirred the wholesale response of the car owning public as have General's trade-in sales.

Created originally by General in 1926, it has been widely imitated, but after all, General's top quality is the one possible basis for success, for giving to the public the genuine values of the Trade-in Plan.

Without that feature of quality leadership which only General can give, the Trade-in Sale would not pay us. We can afford it only because of the assurance that customers taking advantage of this sale will "roll with us" for years to come.

Our one big object is new customers by the hundreds. We count upon the long term patronage that top quality wins.

30,000 TO SEE MICKEY WALKER AND ACE HUDKINS

BIG BATTLE DRAWS LARGE SPORT CROWD

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 21.—Thirty thousand spectators will watch one of the greatest middleweight fights of modern times tonight.

Shoulder to shoulder in the darkness of the big Chicago American League ball park, their eyes will be fixed upon a white splash of canvas across which Mickey Walker, the champion, and Ace Hudkins, the challenger, will strive and strike until, in all probability, one of them goes down into the blood and dust and resin, and stays there.

Not since the memorable days of last September, when Jack Dempsey came to prove that a real champion can come back, and failed by a few fleeting, much-discussed seconds, has Chicago been so aroused over a prize fight. As evidence that the interest is by no means local, there have come to witness the battle movie stars and mayors, governors and millionaires, from all parts of the country.

If the gate receipts reach $200,000, as the promoter, Jim Mullen, confidently hoped today, the affair will be the most remunerative of all middleweight championship contests.

The champion was a 2 to 1 favorite among the sporting gentry today. Mickey Walker's advantage in weight, boxing skill and punching power could not be gainsaid for all the optimism in Nebraska.

Ace Hudkins, after the manner of boxers, is sublimely confident of victory.

"I have brought my six brothers and my sister to see the fight and I am not going to disappoint them," explains the challenger.

It may well be that before the ten rounds are over, Hudkins will be warbling that popular old negro spiritual:

"Tain't my brothers nor my sister but it's me, O Lord,
"Standin' in the need of prayer."

According to dapper little Jack Kearns, whose job as Walker's manager is the reason Tex Rickard did not pluck this rich fistic plum, the Nebraskan will not be standing after the sixth round.

"We," said Mr. Kearns, "will take him in six rounds."

The challenger's backers and Hudkins himself believe that if the Ace can get past the half way mark in tonight's fight he can wear down Walker and win going away.

This would seem, however, to be one championship bout in which odds of 2 to 1 on the title-holder are justified. If the challenger wins, it will be in the nature of a decidedly illogical upset.

It hardly is likely that the presence of the seven little Hudkinses gaping ringward from the surrounding darkness will disturb Mickey Walker. Should he have any qualms, the champion has only to recall what happened in New York the night Col. Charles A. Lindbergh struggled through an admiring throng to the ringside to watch his fellow townsman, this self-same Ace, battle Sergeant Sammy Baker.

From the prompt way in which the little soldier from Mitchell Field stopped Hudkins that night, one would have imagined that Lindy had his signals crossed and was rooting for the air service.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.

One of the most furious fights of modern times should reward the visitors to Comiskey Park, Chicago, tonight, where Mickey Walker is to defend his middleweight title against Ace Hudkins of Nebraska.

One has only to look back upon some of the recent endeavors of these young gentlemen to look forward confidently to action when they meet.

Walker, holding his second ring championship and ruling the class with iron fists has chosen to do most of his fighting among bigger fellows than the wild-eyed lad from Nebraska. Mickey recently knocked out those veteran light-heavyweights Michael McTigue and Paul Aloysius Berlenbach besides polishing off a few second raters in his own division.

Hudkins, who has grown rapidly from a junior lightweight to a middleweight, might have a battle with Joe Dundee for the 147-pound title if the Ace had cared to take the trouble to keep his weight down. The Nebraskan was none too anxious to do this, however since he and a number of others had a suspicion that the Baltimore boy would hand him a trimming at the weight. The Ace felt he would be stronger against Walker than against Dundee, so chose to meet the former.

This will be one bout of real class which Tex Rickard missed staging. Jim Mullen, the Chicago promoter, who gave Walker employment during the winter, is reaping his reward in the balmy June evenings when Mickey struts his stuff and the turnstiles at the old White Sox ball park clicks a golden melody.

Neither Walker nor Hudkins stops once he gets going. Fists will be everywhere tonight. The Nebraskan is certain to swarm over the champion with a windmill attack, carrying the fight to Mickey at the start. The titleholder is perfectly willing to do the carrying himself, but he probably will find Hudkins a harder target to hit than some of the big fellows.

Against a rushingh swinging fighter like the Ace, however, a good counter fighter with a straight punch should be at his best. Mickey has only to let Hudkins come at him and pick him off with straight rights. The result should be a knockout for the champion.

Hudkins does not figure to stop Walker, for the Ace cannot hit very hard. Unless Mickey is deceiving us, and has gone back more than he shows, he should win decisively.

Before Walker wins, however, he will know that he has been in a fight and probably will feel that he has been in half a dozen all at once. Mickey is due to take a lot of punishment before he finally straightens out the Nebraskan and spreads him on the canvas.

If Mickey gets past the Ace, there still is plenty of opposition in the middleweight class. George Courtney of Oklahoma would like to know why the champion has been persistently deaf to legitimate challenges. So would some of the other middleweights who can't seem to make Mickey hear their challenges.

Instead, however, Walker will go out of his class again and fight Pete Latzo at Ebbets Field on the 4th of July. Permission for this bout was granted by the New York State Athletic Association, somewhat to everyone's astonishment. Mickey had been directed to meet Courtney here, but declined.

30,000 TO SEE MICKEY WALKER AND ACE HUDKINS

BIG BATTLE DRAWS LARGE SPORT CROWD

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 21.—Thirty thousand spectators will watch one of the greatest middleweight fights of modern times tonight.

Shoulder to shoulder in the darkness of the big Chicago American League ball park, their eyes will be fixed upon a white splash of canvas across which Mickey Walker, the champion, and Ace Hudkins, the challenger, will strive and strike until, in all probability, one of them goes down into the blood and dust and resin, and stays there.

Not since the memorable days of last September, when Jack Dempsey came to prove that a real champion can come back, and failed by a few fleeting, much-discussed seconds, has Chicago been so aroused over a prize fight. As evidence that the interest is by no means local, there have come to witness the battle movie stars and mayors, governors and millionaires, from all parts of the country.

If the gate receipts reach $200,000, as the promoter, Jim Mullen, confidently hoped today, the affair will be the most remunerative of all middleweight championship contests.

The champion was a 2 to 1 favorite among the sporting gentry today. Mickey Walker's advantage in weight, boxing skill and punching power could not be gainsaid for all the optimism in Nebraska.

Ace Hudkins, after the manner of boxers, is sublimely confident of victory.

"I have brought my six brothers and my sister to see the fight, and I am not going to disappoint them," explains the challenger.

It may well be that before the ten rounds are over, Hudkins will be warbling that popular old negro spirituel:

" 'Tain't my brothers nor my sister, but it's me, O Lord, "Standin' in the need of prayer."

According to dapper little Jack Kearns, whose job as Walker's manager is the reason Tex Rickard did not pluck this rich fistic plum, the Nebraskan will not be standing after the sixth round.

"We," said Mr. Kearns, "will take him in six rounds."

The challenger's backers and Hudkins himself believe that if the Ace can get past the half way mark in tonight's fight he can wear down Walker and win going away.

This would seem, however, to be one championship bout in which odds of 2 to 1 on the title-holder are justified. If the challenger wins, it will be in the nature of a decidedly illogical upset.

It hardly is likely that the presence of the seven little Hudkinses gaping ringward from the surrounding darkness will disturb Mickey Walker. Should he have any qualms, the champion has only to recall what happened in New York the night Col. Charles A. Lindbergh struggled through an admiring throng to the ringside to watch his fellow townsman, this self-same Ace, battle Sergeant Sammy Baker.

From the prompt way in which the little soldier from Mitchell Field stopped Hudkins that night, one would have imagined that Lindy had his signals crossed and was rooting for the air service.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

United Press Sports Editor.

One of the most furious fights of modern times should reward the visitors to Comiskey Park, Chicago, tonight, where Mickey Walker is to defend his middleweight title against Ace Hudkins of Nebraska.

One has only to look back upon some of the recent endeavors of these young gentlemen to look forward confidently to action when they meet.

Walker, holding his second ring championship and ruling the class with iron fists, has chosen to do most of his fighting among bigger fellows than the wild-eyed lad from Nebraska. Mickey recently knocked out those veteran light-heavyweights, Michael McTigue and Paul Aloysius Berlenbach, besides polishing off a few second raters in his own division.

Hudkins, who has grown rapidly from a junior lightweight to a middleweight, might have a battle with Joe Dundee for the 147-pound title if the Ace had cared to take the trouble to keep his weight down. The Nebraskan was none too anxious to do this, however, since he and a number of others had a suspicion that the Baltimore boy would hand him a trimming at the weight. The Ace felt he would be stronger against Walker than against Dundee, so choose to meet the former.

This will be one bout of real class which Tex Rickard missed staging. Jim Mullen, the Chicago promoter, who gave Walker employment during the winter, is reaping his reward in the balmy June evenings when Mickey struts his stuff and the turnstiles at the old White Sox ball park clicks a golden melody.

Neither Walker nor Hudkins stops, once he gets going. Fists will be everywhere tonight. The Nebraskan is certain to swarm over the champion with a windmill attack, carrying the fight to Mickey at the start. The titleholder is perfectly willing to do the carrying himself, but he probably will find Hudkins a harder target to hit than some of the big fellows.

Against a rushingfi swinging fighter like the Ace, however, a good counter fighter with a straight punch should be at his best. Mickey has only to let Hudkins come at him and pick him off with straight rights. The result should be a knockout for the champion.

Hudkins does not figure to stop Walker, for the Ace cannot hit very hard. Unless Mickey is deceiving us, and has gone back more than he shows, he should win decisively.

Before Walker wins, however, he will know that he has been in a fight and probably will feel that he has been in half a dozen all at once. Mickey is due to take a lot of punishment before he finally straightens out the Nebraskan and spreads him on the canvas.

If Mickey gets past the Ace, there still is plenty of opposition in the middleweight class. George Courtney of Oklahoma would like to know why the champion has been persistently deaf to legitimate challenges. So would some of the other middleweights who can't seem to make Mickey hear their challenges.

Instead, however, Walker will go out of his class again and fight Pete Latzo at Ebbets Field on the 4th of July. Permission for this bout was granted by the New York State Athletic Association, somewhat to everyone's astonishment. Mickey had been directed to meet Courtney here, but declined.

MOVIE PLEASES FANS

One reason for the wide-spread success of the motion picture "Beau Sabreur," is the fact that while melodramatic heart-stirring moments are replete throughout the production, the comedy touch has not been forgotten.

From the very start of this Paramount adaptation of Percival C. Wren's thrilling story of the Sahara and the Foreign Legion, the lighter vein is apparent. The comedy has been placed in capable hands.

Joan Standing, in the role of Maudie, the simple English maid of Evelyn Brent, offers a portrayal that is distinctly different and is the reason for many a chuckle. Miss Standing's knowledge of humor aids the picture to a considerable degree.

But the main comedy laurels go to Noah Beery, as the Sheikh El Hamel, apparently a fierce tribe leader and power on the Sahara, and Roscoe Karns, his grand vizier. In some of the most dramatic moments, the indifferent air of both serves to relieve the tension materially.

THE BUSH LEAGUER

Monte Blue, who is always well liked, and Leila Hyams come to the Grand tonight in the picture of the above title. It's the romance of a big town girl and a small town boy—of moonlight and honeysuckle—of baseball and business. A picture that'll make you just glad to be alive!

An impression that Olympia Fields presented no severe test of golfing skill, fostered by Walter Hagen's easy triumphs in the past, has been dispelled by the efforts of the favorites during their practice rounds.

"This is no easy course," said Bobby Jones, who remains first choice in the meeting. The Atlanta lawyer-golfer was first to break par with a neat 70.

A longer and more difficult course than the one "burnt up" by Hagen in winning the Western Open stretches ahead of the ambitious field today. The rough is "as bad as Oakmont," say many of the contestants—and that, in the language of golf, is no compliment.

Rough broke the hearts of many golfers at Oakmont and rough holds the secret of victory at Olympia Fields.

Where Hagen used to drive deliberately to avoid bunkers of the fairway, thick, rough grasses now claim the wayward ball.

The open championship of 1928, which will occupy the attention of the golfing world for the rest of the week, is "as open" as any in many years. DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY
EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT before a city can accomplish much it must have team-work.. Its citizens must CO-OPERATE! Thew must show a willingness to help one another and all together work for a better city.

THAT the cities that are going ahead the fastest are the ones that have shown this spirit of co-operation.

THAT in many cities part of the citizens pull one way and part of them another, resulting in dislike and distrust among the ones that should pull together.

THAT there is something good about every man. If people knew each other better they could pull together better.

THAT any city must sell itself to its citizens before it can sell itself to its neighbors. THAT a spirit of co-operation and pride in the home city must be instilled and crystallized into every thought and action of every individual in order to make their city better.

THAT a city must be awake to its opportunities and STAY AWAKE!

MANY CITIES ARE HAVING "GROWING PAINS;" THESE GROWING PAINS ARE MAKING THEM REALIZE THE MANY HANDICAPS THEY HAVE BEEN WORKING UNDER. MANY OF THEM ARE PAINFUL—THEY ARE PAINFUL TO THOSE INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE BEEN DOING SO MUCH TO HOLD BACK THE GROWTH OF THE HOME CITY.

THESE MOSS-BACKS ARE BEING SHOWN THAT THEY WILL NO LONGER BE ALLOWED TO INTERFERE WITH BETTER BUSINESS AND THE GREATER DEVELOPMENT WHICH IS TO COME.

MOVIE PLEASES FANS

One reason for the wide-spread success of the motion picture "Beau Sabreur," is the fact that while melodramatic heart-stirring moments are replete throughout the production, the comedy touch has not been forgotten.

From the very start of this Paramount adaptation of Percival C. Wren's thrilling story of the Sahara and the Foreign Legion, the lighter vein is apparent. The comedy has been placed in capable hands.

Joan Standing, in the role of Maudie, the simple English maid of Evelyn Brent, offers a portrayal that is distinctly different and is the reason for many a chuckle. Miss Standing's knowledge of humor aids the picture to a considerable degree.

But the main comedy laurels go to Noah Beery, as the Sheikh El Hamel, apparently a fierce tribe leader and power on the Sahara, and Roscoe Karns, his grand vizier. In some of the most dramatic moments, the indifferent air of both serves to relieve the tension materially.

THE BUSH LEAGUER

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY
EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT before a city can accomplish much it must have team-work. Its citizens must CO-OPERATE! They must show a willingness to help one another and all together work for a better city.

THAT the cities that are going ahead the fastest are the ones that have shown this spirit of co-operation.

THAT in many cities part of the citizens pull one way and part of them another, resulting in dislike and distrust among the ones that should pull together.

THAT there is something good about every man. If people knew each other better they could pull together better.

THAT any city must sell itself to its citizens before it can sell itself to its neighbors. THAT a spirit of co-operation and pride in the home city must be instilled and crystallized into every thought and action of every individual in order to make their city better.

THAT a city must be awake to its opportunities and STAY AWAKE!

MANY CITIES ARE HAVING "GROWING PAINS;" THESE GROWING PAINS ARE MAKING THEM REALIZE THE MANY HANDICAPS THEY HAVE BEEN WORKING UNDER. MANY OF THEM ARE PAINFUL—THEY ARE PAINFUL TO THOSE INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE BEEN DOING SO MUCH TO HOLD BACK THE GROWTH OF THE HOME CITY.

THESE MOSS-BACKS ARE BEING SHOWN THAT THEY WILL NO LONGER BE ALLOWED TO INTERFERE WITH BETTER BUSINESS AND THE GREATER DEVELOPMENT WHICH IS TO COME.
